

Flexible Work Policy

Internal synthetic policy | Effective 18 August 2026 | Review due 18 August 2027

Policy owner	People Operations
Applies to	Orchid People role labels and approved systems only
Status	Internal operating standard; not legal advice

Purpose and scope

- Defines a consistent, role-based approach to flexible work arrangements while protecting service coverage, collaboration, information handling, and equitable access.
- This document describes an internal Orchid People operating standard. It does not create contractual rights and should be applied with local guidance approved for the relevant work.

Principles

- Decisions are based on role requirements and business coverage, not personal preference alone.
- Comparable roles receive comparable consideration; restrictions must be explained in operational terms.
- Flexible arrangements may be adjusted when service, safety, or information controls require it.

Required workflow

- A manager and role holder identify the proposed schedule, location, coverage plan, and review date.
- The manager confirms team coverage and required on-site activities, then seeks People Operations review for non-standard arrangements.
- The arrangement is documented in the approved internal workflow and reviewed at the stated interval.

Controls, evidence and exceptions

- Do not use unapproved locations for restricted work or candidate data.
- Keep only the minimum record needed to administer the arrangement.
- Exceptions require a time-bound written approval by People Operations and the accountable leader.

Roles and review cycle

- People Operations maintains the policy, trains role holders, and records approved exceptions. Managers apply the policy within their teams. Workforce participants raise questions before taking an uncertain action.
- People Operations reviews this policy annually, after a material process change, or after a confirmed control gap. Version history: v1.0 issued 18 August 2026.
