Internal synthetic policy | Effective 18 August 2026 | Review due 18 August 2027

Policy owner	People Operations
Applies to	Orchid People role labels and approved systems only
Status	Internal operating standard; not legal advice

Purpose and scope

- Sets an internal standard for equitable access to recruitment, development, performance, and workplace opportunities across Orchid People.
- This document describes an internal Orchid People operating standard. It does not create contractual rights and should be applied with local guidance approved for the relevant work.

Principles

- Evaluate work-related capabilities and job requirements using consistent criteria.
- Use inclusive language and accessible process options where reasonably available.
- Do not retaliate against a person who raises a concern or participates in a review.

Required workflow

- Use role-specific criteria before a process starts.
- Record selection rationale in approved internal systems using role labels rather than unnecessary personal detail.
- Escalate a potential inconsistency or barrier to People Operations before a final decision.

Controls, evidence and exceptions

- People Operations periodically samples process evidence for consistency.
- Sensitive concern records are access-limited and retained only under the internal retention schedule.
- A concern may be raised through a manager or People Operations; handling is impartial and need-to-know.

Roles and review cycle

- People Operations maintains the policy, trains role holders, and records approved exceptions. Managers apply the policy within their teams. Workforce participants raise questions before taking an uncertain action.
- People Operations reviews this policy annually, after a material process change, or after a confirmed control gap. Version history: v1.0 issued 18 August 2026.
