Internal synthetic policy | Effective 18 August 2026 | Review due 18 August 2027

Policy owner	People Operations
Applies to	Orchid People role labels and approved systems only
Status	Internal operating standard; not legal advice

Purpose and scope

- Defines minimum internal handling expectations for candidate-related information used in requisition and interview processes.
- This document describes an internal Orchid People operating standard. It does not create contractual rights and should be applied with local guidance approved for the relevant work.

Principles

- Collect only information relevant to the hiring process.
- Use approved systems and role-based access.
- Avoid copying candidate information into personal notes, unapproved messaging, or unnecessary exports.

Required workflow

- People Operations configures a requisition workspace with approved access.
- Interviewers view only materials needed for their assigned evaluation.
- When a requisition closes, People Operations follows the internal retention and disposition workflow.

Controls, evidence and exceptions

- Do not include candidate names, contact details, or resumes in training examples or policy documents.
- Report suspected misrouting or inappropriate access promptly to People Operations.
- Any exception needs documented purpose, minimum-data rationale, owner, and expiry.

Roles and review cycle

- People Operations maintains the policy, trains role holders, and records approved exceptions. Managers apply the policy within their teams. Workforce participants raise questions before taking an uncertain action.
- People Operations reviews this policy annually, after a material process change, or after a confirmed control gap. Version history: v1.0 issued 18 August 2026.
