

Consent Language Reference

Beacon Field Research | Study Beta | July 2026 | Synthetic planning reference

Plain-language opening

"You are invited to try a fictional prototype and share what you notice. We are evaluating the design, not your ability. Participation is voluntary."

Choice and recording

"You may skip questions, take a break, keep your camera off, or end the session at any time. If recording is offered, we will ask for your choice before starting; typed notes can be used if you decline."

Privacy boundary

"Please do not share client, employer-confidential, personal, health, or account information. We will use a participant code in study notes and reports."

Accessibility

"Tell us what support would make participation comfortable, such as captions, keyboard navigation, magnification, extra time, or breaks. You do not need to explain why you need the support."

Facilitator confirmation

Record only consent choice, participant code, and requested support. If the participant seems unsure, pause and restate the choice in plain language before continuing.
